Table of Contents

1	Introduction
	Compensation for Expropriation	13
	Jean du Plessis and Jacques Sluysmans
1.1	Introduction	13
1.2	Framework	13
1.3	Who Counts?	15
1.4	What Is Counted?	18
1.5	Conclusion	20
2	Eminent Domain and Regulatory Takings
	Towards a Unified Theory	21
	Hanoch Dagan
2.1	Introduction	21
2.2	The Task	22
2.3	Three Lessons from Eminent Domain Law	23
2.3.1	Good Citizens Are Not Expected to Sacrifice	23
2.3.2	Important Projects Need Not Thwart Compensation	26
2.3.3	Home Is More Than Land	28
2.4	Three Lessons from Regulatory Takings Law	30
2.4.1	Compensation Is Not Always Justified	30
2.4.2	Distribution Always Matters	33
2.4.3	Compensation Rules as a Social Compact	36
2.5	Concluding Remarks	41
Part I	Who Counts?	43
3	Avoiding the Worst-Case Scenario
	An Assessment of Compensation Eligibility Requirements Applicable to Indigenous Peoples and Local Communities in 30 Countries	45
	Nicholas K. Tagliarino
3.1	Introduction	45

3.1.1 Background 47
3.2 The Right of IPLCs to Compensation as Established by the VGGTs and Other International Instruments 50
3.3 Background and Methodology 52
3.4 The Value of this Legal Analysis 55
3.5 Research Findings and Analysis 56
3.5.1 Compensation for Formally Recognised Tenure Rights Held by IPLCs 57
3.5.2 Compensation for Formally Recognised IPLC Tenure Rights Regardless of Whether Those Rights Are Registered 59
3.5.3 Compensation for Formally Recognised IPLC Tenure Rights Regardless of Whether the Land Is Developed, Cultivated, or Has Improvements 63
3.6 Additional Limitations on ILPC Rights to Compensation 65
3.6.1 Legal Definition of 'Community Land' 65
3.6.2 Time Requirements 68
3.7 Suggested Avenues to Pursue 69
3.8 Appendix: Compensation Eligibility Indicator Findings 71

4 Development with Impoverishment Displacement, Resettlement and Inadequate Compensation in India and Nigeria 87
Maartje van Eerd
4.1 Introduction 87
4.2 Development-Induced Displacement and Resettlement 87
4.2.1 Public Interest and Its Dilemmas 88
4.2.2 Guidelines of Selected International Development Banks 89
4.2.3 Complications with Eligibility 91
4.2.4 Guidelines and Complications with Respect to Compensation 92
4.2.5 International Guidelines on Development-Induced Displacement and Resettlement 94
4.2.6 The Right to Adequate Housing and Protection against Forced Evictions 96
4.2.7 The Multi-Dimensional Impact of Displacement and Resettlement 97
4.3 Case Studies and Lessons Learnt from the Practice of Displacement, Resettlement and Compensation in India and Nigeria 99
4.3.1 India 100
4.3.1.1 The Neo-Liberal Paradigm and Its Impact on Displacement and Resettlement in India 100
4.3.1.2 Legal Framework for Displacement and Resettlement 102

	4.3.1.3	Housing Policies at the National Level	104
	4.3.1.4	Housing and Slum Policies in Tamil Nadu	105
	4.3.1.5	Resettlement Issues in Chennai	106
4.3.2	Nigeria		108
	4.3.2.1	The Historical Context of Abuja	108
	4.3.2.2	Urbanisation in Abuja	108
	4.3.2.3	The Legal Framework of Nigeria With Regard to Land and Housing	109
	4.3.2.4	Land Ownership, the Land Use Act, Expropriation and Compensation	110
	4.3.2.5	The Abuja Master Plan, Relocation, and Resettlement	113
	4.3.2.6	Forced Evictions in Abuja	115
4.4	Conclusion		117

PART II WHAT IS COUNTED? 121

5 Full Compensation, Fair Compensation or No Compensation in Expropriations for Land Reform A South African Perspective 123
Antonie Gildenhuys

5.1	Introduction	123
5.2	Expropriation	125
5.2.1	Formal Expropriations	125
5.2.2	Constructive Expropriations	126
5.2.3	Right to Compensation for the Expropriation of Land	127
5.3	Standards and Norms for Determining Compensation for Expropriation in Various Jurisdictions	129
5.3.1	Constitutions That Require Compensation to Be Just, Fair, Full or Adequate	129
5.3.2	Constitutions That Contain Different or No Norms for Compensation	131
5.3.3	Compensation under the European Convention on Human Rights	134
5.3.4	Constitutions That Require Compensation to Reflect an Equitable Balance of Competing Interests	135
5.4	Determination of Compensation in Terms of the South African Constitution	137
5.5	Market Value as a Factor in the Determination of Compensation	141
5.6	Land Reform in South Africa	144
5.6.1	Determination of Compensation in Expropriations for Land Reform	145
5.6.2	Funding Land Reform	150

5.6.3 Administration and Implementation of the Land-Reform Process 154
5.7 Conclusion 155

6 A Law-and-Economics Perspective on Fair Compensation in Transnational Land Deals in the Context of Customary Tenure Regimes 159
Marcello de Maria
6.1 Introduction 159
6.2 Literature Review 163
6.2.1 The Impact of LSLAs on Local Populations and the Fair Compensation Issue 163
6.2.2 To Compensate or Not to Compensate? The Optimal Compensation Rule 168
6.2.3 Towards a Fair (Operational) Definition of Fair Compensation in LSLAs 174
6.3 A Theoretical Model for Fair Compensation in LSLAs 178
6.4 Discussion 184
6.4.1 The Nature of the Investment and the Features of the Concession Matter 184
6.4.2 Land Value or Land Values? 185
6.4.3 Players' Behaviour, Bargaining Power, and Information 187
6.5 Concluding Remarks 189

7 How the Determination of Compensation Is Influenced by the Disjunction between the Concepts of 'Value' and 'Compensation' 191
Elmien du Plessis
7.1 Introduction 191
7.2 Expropriation: General Remarks Regarding Compensation 192
7.2.1 Authority to Expropriate 192
7.2.2 The Compensation Requirement 194
7.2.2.1 Introduction 194
7.2.2.2 The Compensation Standard in the Constitution 195
7.2.3 The Expropriation Act 200
7.2.3.1 Market Value 201
7.2.3.2 Solatium 204
7.2.3.3 Interest 204
7.2.4 Some Remarks about the "Compensation Standard" and Value 205
7.3 Who May Determine Compensation? 205
7.4 Who Determines Value? 209
7.4.1 Property Valuation Act 17 of 2014 212

	7.4.1.1 Introduction	212
	7.4.1.2 The Act	212
7.4.2	The Draft Regulations Issued in Terms of the Act	215
7.4.3	Valuation for Land Reform Purposes: Guidelines from the Department of Land Affairs	216
7.5	Conclusion	221
8	Compensation Claims and the New Function of Quasi-Judicial Appraisers in Israel	223
	Yifat Holzman-Gazit
8.1	Introduction	223
8.2	Compensation for Expropriation in Israel: Legal Principles	224
8.3	Valuation Phases in the Process of Expropriation	229
8.4	The New Function of QJ Appraisers	231
8.5	QJ Appraisers and Compensation Claims	234
8.5.1	Two Venues for Adjudication	234
8.5.2	Procedure and Fees	235
8.6	Placing Compensation Decisions in Context: The Valuation Practice and Market Prices	238
8.7	Conclusion	241
List of Contributors and Editors		243