

TABLE OF CONTENTS

PART I	GENERAL BACKGROUND	11
	The state of devolution and decentralisation in social security, a comparative European analysis: an introduction to this edited volume	13
	Paul Schoukens & Gijsbert Vonk
1	Introduction	13
2	Setup and method of the research	15
3	Some reflections on the outcome of the country studies	19
4	Further research agenda: challenges for the local welfare state	21
	Federalism and devolution in social security	25
	Danny Pieters
1	Federalism, decentralisation and ‘deconcentration’	25
2	Social security competences	28
3	Distribution of social security competences in a number of federal states	30
	Sharing power with employers and employees: a tried and proven form of functional decentralisation in Europe	41
	Ulrich Becker
1	Introduction	41
2	Social self-government as a specific form of functional decentralisation: features and appearances	42
3	On the functioning of social self-government: the case of Germany	48
4	Final observations: weaknesses and strengths of social self-government	53

PART II	COUNTRY REPORTS	55
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Austria		57
	Verena Zwinger
1	A general picture of the social security system and the administrative structure	57
2	The state of devolution	58
3	The state of decentralisation	62
4	The state of the debate and future perspectives	71
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Belgium		73
	Jessie De Weyer & Paul Schoukens
1	Belgium	73
2	Social security	78
3	Division of competences in the field of social security	82
4	Social assistance at the local level (territorial decentralisation)	85
5	Regional social security under development	86
6	The state of the debate and future perspectives	89
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in the Czech Republic		93
	Jakub Tomšej
1	A general picture of the social security system and administrative structure	93
2	The state of devolution	95
3	The state of decentralisation	99
4	The state of the debate and future perspectives	105
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Germany		107
	Stephan Rixen
1	A general picture of the system of social security and the administrative organisation	107
2	The state of devolution	109
3	The state of decentralisation	114
4	The state of the debate and future perspectives	121

Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Hungary	123
Gábor Juhász
1 A general picture of the social security system and its administrative structure	123
2 The state of devolution	124
3 The state of decentralisation	127
4 The state of debate and future perspectives	133
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Italy	137
Mario Battaglini
1 A general picture of the system of social security	137
2 The state of devolution	139
3 The state of (administrative) decentralisation	144
4 The state of the debate and future perspectives – innovation, learning, and equity	146
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in the Netherlands	151
Annette Jansen & Gijsbert Vonk
1 A general picture of the system of social security and the administrative structure	151
2 The state of devolution	153
3 The state of decentralisation	157
4 The state of the debate and future perspectives	163
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Slovenia	165
Luka Mišič & Grega Strban
1 Outline of the social security system	165
2 State structure and general division of competences	167
3 Social security: more than a state of functional decentralisation	168
4 Social security in Yugoslavia: A state of devolution?	174
5 Conclusion	176
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Spain	179
Borja Suárez Corujo
1 A general picture of the Spanish social security system and its administrative organisation	179
2 The state of ‘devolution’ (political decentralisation)	180
3 The state of (administrative) decentralisation	192

4	The state of the debate and future perspectives	195
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Sweden		201
	Titti Mattsson & Elin Osbeck
1	A general picture of the social-security system and the administrative structure	201
2	Devolution of government	202
3	Decentralisation of government	208
4	State of the debate and future prospects	216
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Switzerland		219
	Thomas Gächter & Thuy Xuan Truong
1	A general picture of the system of social security and the administrative organisation	219
2	The state of devolution	220
3	The state of decentralisation	225
4	The state of the debate and future perspectives	231
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in Turkey		233
	Galip Emre Yildirim
1	A general picture of the system of social security and the administrative structure	233
2	The state of devolution	235
3	The state of the debate and future perspectives	243
Devolution and decentralisation in social security: the situation in the United Kingdom		245
	Guto Ifan & Ed Gareth Poole
1	A general picture of the system of social security and the administrative organization	245
2	The state of devolution	247
3	The state of decentralisation	260
4	The state of the debate and future perspectives	267
Centralised bibliography		269
About the authors		297
Previously Published in the Governance & Recht Series		301