

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Foreword	vii
Acknowledgements	xi
List of Abbreviations	1
1 Introduction	3
1.1 Scope of the Work	3
1.2 Remarks on Methodology	5
1.3 The Concept of Commodity	8
1.4 Bias towards Certain Commodities and Markets	9
1.5 Contractual Typology of the Commodity Trade	10
1.5.1 Cash Contracts and Futures Contracts	10
1.5.2 Futures Contracts	12
1.5.2.1 Futures Contracts as Financial Instruments	12
1.5.2.2 Standardized Contracts	15
1.5.2.3 Clearing	16
1.5.2.4 FCMs as Agents Acting for Undisclosed Principals	17
1.5.3 Options	27
1.5.4 Commodity Swaps	28
1.5.5 Long-Term Contracts	29
1.5.6 Contract Farming Arrangements	31
1.6 The Economics of Commodities	32
1.6.1 Liquidity	32
1.6.2 Price Volatility	34
2 The Scope of Application of the CISG	37
2.1 The Concept of Goods	37
2.2 Documentary Sales and Transfers of Rights	38
2.3 The Concept of Sales Contracts	39
2.3.1 Cash Contracts	40
2.3.2 Futures Contracts	41
2.3.3 Sales Contracts Formed within Commodity Exchanges	43
2.3.4 Options and Swaps	46
2.4 Internationality	46
2.4.1 Cash Contracts	46
2.4.2 Commodity Exchange Sales	52

TABLE OF CONTENTS

2.5	Exclusions Under Article 2 CISG	58
2.5.1	Generally	58
2.5.2	Commodity Exchanges and Auction Sales	64
2.6	Concluding Remarks: The CISG and Futures Contracts	67
2.7	Article 3 CISG	68
2.7.1	Goods to Be Produced in the Future	68
2.7.2	Services Associated with Sales Contracts	69
2.8	Retention of Title Provisions vis-à-vis Article 4(b) CISG	70
2.9	Commodity Sales and the PICC	71
2.9.1	Where the Parties Have Chosen the PICC	73
2.9.2	The Relationship between the PICC and the CISG	75
2.10	Commodity Sales and the PLACL	76
3	Gap-Filling	79
3.1	Contracts without an Agreed Price	79
3.2	Other Gaps: A Proposed Framework for Their Supplementation	82
3.2.1	Good Faith and Similar Doctrines	84
3.2.2	Implication of Terms in Common Law Jurisdictions	86
3.2.3	Common Ground between Both Approaches	86
3.2.4	Different Approaches in Uniform Law	87
3.2.5	Partial Conclusion	90
3.3	Implication of a Duty to Cooperate in Long-Term Contracts	91
3.4	Terms Left for Future Negotiation	94
4	Contract Formation	107
4.1	CISG Provisions That May Differ from Usual Contract Practices	107
4.1.1	Consideration and ‘Causa’ Are Not Required	107
4.1.2	The Price Need Not Be Agreed	108
4.2	Price, Quantity and Quality in Certain Forward Contracts	109
4.3	The Formation of Contracts in Commodity Exchanges	110
4.4	FCM as Agents: Agency and the CISG	117
4.5	Incorporation of Standard Terms by Reference	118
5	Obligations of the Parties	125
5.1	Implicit Quality Parameters	125
5.2	Take-or-Pay Provisions and the CISG	130
6	Fundamental Breach and Avoidance	139
6.1	Proposed Criterion of Assessment: Economic Rationale	140
6.2	Typical Cases for the Sale of Commodities	144
6.2.1	Fundamental Breach for Belatedness of Performance	144

6.2.1.1	Delayed Delivery of Goods	144
6.2.1.2	Delayed Performance in Documentary Sales	146
6.2.1.3	Delay in the Performance of Other Obligations	147
6.2.1.4	Elements Indicating the Essentiality of Timely Performance	147
6.2.1.5	Commodity Sales Where Time Is Not of the Essence	148
6.2.2	Fundamental Breach for Nonconformity	152
6.2.2.1	Nonconforming Goods	152
6.2.2.2	Nonconforming Documents	158
6.2.2.3	Breach of Term Regarding the Quantity of Goods	160
6.3	Nachfrist and Anticipatory Breach: Valero v. Greeni	163
6.4	Suspension of Performance, Stoppage in Transit and Anticipatory Breach	165
6.4.1	Suspension of Performance (Art. 71(1))	166
6.4.2	Stoppage in Transit (Art. 71(2))	171
6.4.3	Anticipatory Breach (Art. 72)	176
6.4.4	Anticipatory Breach in Installment Contracts (Art. 73)	182
6.5	Fundamental Breach in Long-Term Contracts	189
6.6	Fundamental Breach in the PICC	192
6.7	Avoidance Rights Derived from Domestic Law	193
6.8	Good Faith as a Restriction on the Right of Avoidance	197
7	Rules Regarding Assessment of Damages	199
7.1	Substitute (Cover) Transactions	199
7.2	Where a Substitute Transaction Cannot Be Identified	201
7.3	Foreseeability of Damages	203
8	Impediments, Force Majeure, Change of Circumstances, Economic Hardship	205
8.1	Article 79 CISG: Abstract Requirements	205
8.1.1	Event beyond the Control of the Obligor	206
8.1.2	Impediment Not Accounted for	208
8.1.3	Insurmountability	210
8.1.4	Cause-Effect Relationship	211
8.2	Economic Hardship and Article 79 CISG	211
8.2.1	Legislative History	211
8.2.2	Economic Hardship as an Impediment	213
8.2.3	The Threshold for Obtaining an Exemption on the Grounds of Hardship	215
8.2.4	Equilibrium of the Contract Is Not Relevant	221

TABLE OF CONTENTS

8.2.5	Hardship When the Value of the Performance Has Diminished	222
8.2.6	Frustration of Purpose	225
8.2.7	Supervening Market Disruption	227
8.2.8	The Time Element in Cases of Economic Hardship	228
8.2.9	Case Law Doctrine	229
8.3	Nonperformance Attributable to a Third Party	230
8.4	Issues That Are Likely to Surface in Commodity Sales	232
8.4.1	Fungibility of Goods	232
8.4.2	Governmental Regulations	234
8.4.3	Overcrowded Port	237
8.4.4	Import Quota, Export Permit	238
8.4.5	Take-or-Pay Provisions	238
8.4.6	Climate and Weather	239
8.4.7	Economic Situation of the Obligor	239
8.4.8	Inflation	241
8.4.9	Ethical Impediment	243
8.5	Article 79 CISG: Consequences of Its Application	244
8.5.1	In Cases of Impediment	244
8.5.2	In Case of Economic Hardship	247
8.5.3	Forced Renegotiation and/or Adaptation in Long-Term Contracts	254
8.5.3.1	Trends in Law	254
8.5.3.2	Trends in Contractual Practices	257
8.5.3.3	Implication of a Term	258
8.5.4	Adjustment of Contractual Provisions beyond the Price	263
8.6	Rules of Exemption under the PICC	264
8.6.1	Impediment (or Force Majeure)	264
8.6.2	Economic Hardship	265
8.6.3	Interplay between the PICC and Domestic Law	270
8.7	Force Majeure Clauses of Some Well-Known Standard Form Contracts	271
8.7.1	The GAFTA Contract No. 100	271
8.7.2	The ICE Futures US ‘Sugar 11’:	272
8.7.3	The Repsol Agreement	273
8.7.4	The Shell Agreement	276
8.7.5	The GIIGNL Agreement	278
8.7.6	General Analysis	280
8.8	Article 79 CISG and Preemption by Contractual Provisions	281
8.9	Practical Advice: Parties Should Draft Explicit Clauses	286

9 Suitability of the CISG for Governing Commodity Sales	291
9.1 The ‘Uncertainty Argument’	291
9.2 Favor Contractus v. Perfect Tender	293
9.2.1 English Law and the CISG Are Not That Different	295
9.2.2 The Fundamentality Standard under the CISG Is Flexible	300
9.3 Rules Regarding the Passing of Risks	306
9.4 Assessment of Damages in Case of Breach	312
9.4.1 Notional Damages v. Actual Damages	312
9.4.2 Date of Reference for the Assessment of Damages	313
9.5 Specific Performance	314
9.6 Criticism Regarding Article 79 CISG	315
9.7 String Trading	317
9.8 Litigating in England Is Costly	318
9.9 The US and the CISG: A Case Study	320
9.10 A Partial Conclusion: The CISG Is Not Unsuitable for Commodity Sales	327
10 Towards an Increased Acceptance of the CISG among Commodity Traders	329
10.1 Network Effects and Collective Action Issue	329
10.2 Case in Point: The Exclusion of the CISG by an Australian Association	333
10.3 Private Legal Systems	335
10.4 The UK and the CISG	338
10.5 In Practice: Model Contracts or Clauses	341
11 Conclusions	347
Table of Cases	351
Bibliography	363