

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abbreviations	xiii
1 Introduction: cODR procedures and the search for justice	1
1.1 The difficult road to consumer access to justice	1
1.1.1 Consumer access to justice	1
1.1.2 Consumer redress pathways	2
1.1.3 Consumer online dispute resolution in Europe	4
1.1.4 cODR and access to justice	6
1.2 Research Question	7
1.3 Aims	8
1.4 Scope and delimitations	8
1.4.1 Access to Justice	9
1.4.1.1 Procedural Justice: A normative perspective	9
1.4.1.2 Procedural Justice: a social psychological perspective	10
1.4.2 Individual private enforcement	11
1.4.3 Consumers	12
1.5 Methodology	12
1.5.1 Research methods and sources	13
1.5.1.1 Doctrinal research	13
1.5.1.2 Empirical research	13
1.5.2 Selection of jurisdictions	16
1.6 Outline	19
2 Pathways to individual consumer redress in the EU	21
2.1 Introduction	21
2.2 Consumer redress: introductory remarks	22
2.2.1 The overlap between public and private enforcement	22
2.2.2 Private consumer redress through individual and collective action	25
2.2.3 Characteristics of consumer disputes	28
2.2.4 Information sources	31
2.3 Direct negotiation	32
2.3.1 Internal complaint handling mechanisms	34
2.3.2 Complaint assistance tools	35

TABLE OF CONTENTS

2.3.3	A case-study: Klachtenkompas	38
2.3.4	Evaluation	47
2.4	Consumer alternative dispute resolution	48
2.4.1	A wide variety of consumer alternative dispute resolution models	48
2.4.1.1	Consumer ombudsmen models	49
2.4.1.2	Consumer arbitration bodies	49
2.4.1.3	Binding advice model	53
2.4.1.4	Consumer mediation services	54
2.4.2	The EU level: the ADR Directive and the ODR Regulation	57
2.4.3	The national level: the Netherlands	61
2.4.3.1	Dutch CDR bodies	61
2.4.3.2	Implementation of the ADR Directive	63
2.4.4	The national level: The United Kingdom	64
2.4.4.1	CDR bodies in the United Kingdom	65
2.4.4.2	Implementation of the ADR Directive	69
2.4.5	Consumer online dispute resolution	69
2.4.6	Evaluation	70
2.4.6.1	Underenforcement of consumer law	71
2.4.6.2	The quality of CDR	72
2.4.6.3	The low uptake of CDR	74
2.4.6.4	The private nature of CDR	76
2.5	Court procedures for resolving consumer claims	76
2.5.1	The EU approach	77
2.5.2	The national level: the Netherlands and the United Kingdom	78
2.5.3	Evaluation	81
2.6	Conclusion	82
3	A general introduction into ODR	85
3.1	Introduction	85
3.2	The origin and development of ODR	85
3.3	ODR techniques	88
3.3.1	Credit-card chargeback mechanisms	88
3.3.2	Online negotiation	89
3.3.3	Online mediation	91
3.3.4	Online arbitration	93
3.3.5	Online ombudsmen	94
3.3.6	Online mock jury	94

3.4	Opportunities of ODR	95
3.4.1	Cost savings	95
3.4.2	Time savings	96
3.4.3	Convenience	96
3.4.4	Feedback and regulatory function	97
3.5	Challenges of ODR	98
3.5.1	Digital exclusion	98
3.5.2	Costs	98
3.5.3	Loss of non-verbal cues	99
3.5.4	Technical difficulties	99
3.5.5	Security and privacy concerns	100
3.6	Initiatives on the regulation of ODR	100
3.7	Conclusion	102
4	Consumer online dispute resolution pathways to individual consumer redress in the EU	105
4.1	Introduction	105
4.2	cODR providers	106
4.2.1	Technologies used in cODR procedures	106
4.2.2	ODR techniques used by CDR bodies	108
4.2.3	Illustrations of European cODR providers	110
4.2.4	(c)ODR bodies operating in the Netherlands	115
4.2.4.1	ODR bodies	115
4.2.4.2	Consumer ODR in the Netherlands	120
4.2.5	ODR bodies operating in the United Kingdom	123
4.2.5.1	ODR bodies	123
4.2.5.2	Consumer ODR in the United Kingdom	125
4.2.6	Conclusions regarding the cODR field in the Netherlands and the United Kingdom	128
4.2.6.1	Definition on ODR	128
4.2.6.2	Wide variety in forms of ODR procedures	129
4.2.6.3	Access to CDR	130
4.2.6.4	Bringing parties to ODR	132
4.2.6.5	Levels of implementation of technology in ODR procedures	132
4.2.6.6	Loss of non-verbal cues and trust-building	133
4.2.6.7	Online text-based procedures	133
4.2.6.8	Digital qualifications of ODR staff	135
4.2.6.9	Legal qualifications of ODR staff	137

TABLE OF CONTENTS

4.2.6.10	ODR as feedback and policy tool	138
4.2.7	Evaluation of cODR procedures	139
4.3	ODR procedures offered by online intermediary marketplaces	140
4.3.1	Relationships within online intermediary marketplaces	141
4.3.2	The ODR processes offered by online intermediary marketplaces	142
4.3.3	Examples of ODR processes offered by online intermediary marketplaces	144
4.3.4	Evaluation of the fairness of internal ODR procedures undertaken by online intermediary marketplaces	149
4.3.5	Court actions against online marketplaces	153
4.4	The EU ODR platform	155
4.4.1	The process of the EU ODR platform	155
4.4.2	Evaluation of the ODR platform and suggestions for improvement	157
4.4.2.1	Restricted scope	158
4.4.2.2	Limited functions	158
4.4.2.3	Voluntary nature	159
4.4.2.4	30-day deadline	160
4.4.2.5	Lack of standards of quality and expertise for ODR advisors	160
4.5	Conclusion	162
5	Standards of access and justice in cODR pathways	163
5.1	Introduction	163
5.2	The right to access to justice in European treaties	165
5.2.1	Procedural safeguards enshrined in Article 6(1) ECHR and 47 EU Charter	167
5.2.2	The development of access to justice from courts to ADR	171
5.2.3	The application of Articles 6(1) ECHR and 47 EU Charter to ODR	172
5.2.4	The importance of taking into account Articles 6(1) ECHR and 47 EU Charter in the design of cODR	174
5.2.5	Evaluation	176
5.3	Access to fair CDR procedures in EU legislative instruments	177
5.3.1	Quality in ODR	178
5.3.2	Standards of quality in sectoral EU legislative instruments	180
5.3.3	Standards of quality of the ADR Directive and ODR Regulation	182

5.3.3.1	Accessibility	182
5.3.3.2	Independence, impartiality, and expertise	183
5.3.3.3	Transparency	184
5.3.3.4	Effectiveness	184
5.3.3.5	Fairness	184
5.3.3.6	Liberty	185
5.3.3.7	Legality	185
5.3.3.8	Summary	186
5.3.4	Quality of ODR at the national level	187
5.3.5	Evaluation	188
5.3.5.1	Accessibility	189
5.3.5.2	Independence, impartiality, and expertise	190
5.3.5.3	Transparency	191
5.3.5.4	Effectiveness	192
5.3.5.5	Fairness	193
5.3.5.6	Liberty	194
5.3.5.7	Legality	195
5.3.5.8	Summary	195
5.4	Access to a fair ODR procedure offered by online intermediary marketplaces	196
5.4.1	Quality in ODR processes offered by online intermediary marketplaces	196
5.4.2	The notion of online marketplaces	199
5.4.3	EU Regulatory framework for online intermediary marketplaces.	200
5.4.3.1	The P2B Regulation	201
5.4.3.2	The Digital Services Act	203
5.4.3.3	The GDPR	205
5.4.4	Evaluation	205
5.4.4.1	The P2B Regulation	206
5.4.4.2	The DSA	207
5.4.4.3	The GDPR	211
5.4.4.4	Summary	211
5.5	Conclusion	214
6	Consumer ODR as a pathway to individual consumer redress in the EU	217
6.1	Introduction	217
6.2	Access to fair cODR procedures offered by CDR bodies	219

TABLE OF CONTENTS

6.2.1	Introduction	219
6.2.2	Access	221
6.2.3	Expertise, independence, and impartiality	228
6.2.4	Transparency	233
6.2.5	Effectiveness	236
6.2.6	Fairness	239
6.2.7	Liberty	245
6.2.8	Legality	246
6.3	Access to fair cODR mechanisms offered by online intermediary marketplaces	248
6.3.1	Introduction	249
6.3.2	Accessibility	250
6.3.3	Independence, impartiality, and expertise	255
6.3.4	Transparency	257
6.3.5	Effectiveness	259
6.3.6	Fairness	260
6.3.7	Liberty	264
6.3.8	Legality	265
6.4	The EU ODR platform	266
6.4.1	Enhanced information	266
6.4.2	Redirection	268
6.4.3	The integration of an online assisted-negotiation tool	270
6.4.4	An ODR function	273
6.4.5	A regulatory and feedback function	274
6.5	A monitoring framework	276
6.5.1	Monitoring framework for CDR bodies offering ODR procedures	276
6.5.2	Monitoring framework of ODR offered by online intermediary marketplaces	277
6.5.3	The EU ODR platform	280
6.5.4	A role for the civil court in the overall monitoring framework of cODR	280
6.6	The integration of enforcement mechanisms	281
6.7	Conclusion	283
	Bibliography	285
	Table of cases	319

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Annex I Respondents	321
Annex II Survey	323